Synopsis: Bad poetry, good sex, and severe academic misconduct. Professor Samantha Stafford - bitter, brilliant, foxy - just wants to write a very serious book on Shakespeare. But one of her students is madly in love with her, her publicist wants her to do something more commercial, and she is persistently haunted by an entity claiming to be the ghost of Christopher Marlowe. Meanwhile, Jack Hooper, the university's most rugged and studly librarian, has lost a prized manuscript to a mysterious thief. Can Stafford prove her innocence, clear her mind, finish her book and keep her pantsuit on? Find out in this sassy, smart, unforgettable farce.
