of an author to complete a suit. This is similar in that each suit has some trivia about a particular woman in history, but each card has the standard playing card suits on them. It doesn't affect much, but its really just a deck of cards with interesting facts as opposed to a separate and unique game based on famous women.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. We love this game at homeBy megan1230We love this game at home! It's so cool to introduce our kids to famous women that may not be introduced to them in school. The game is very similar to "Go Fish" but you can also easily use it like a regular deck of cards. The only down side of the deck is there is SO much information, it's impossible to pick it all up while you're playing a card game!2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. good card gameBy E. ErvinI used this card game at school with students. It seemed to go over quite well. I know that I have enjoyed playing this particular card game. It is a good way to learn about famous women in American history - and then you can assign reports to the students (if you are so inclined.)

Some of the women who made a difference are: Helen Keller, Sacajawea, Frances Perkins, Eleanor Roosevelt, Amelia Earhart, Sojourner Truth, and Mary McLeod Bethune.
