Unlike many photographers who maintain a strict divide between their commercial and private work, Teller has always combined the two. Indeed this merging is one reason for Teller's progressive edge. The Keys to the House contains recent photographs of Teller's life at and around his house in Suffolk: landscapes, portraits of family and friends. But of course Teller's vision would not be complete without the occasional fashion figure who entered his world--be it Lily Cole floating like Ophelia, or Vivienne Westwood leaning on a red Mercedes Benz.
