Stephen Gan and Tobias Schweitzer's relationship is shown in this book through love letters and photos they have taken from their trips. Stephen Gan said something about complacency and it goes something like this "how can you convince someone to move on and get on with their lives if they are too complacent with what they have right now.." Read this book, you'll probably learn something about a thing or two.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Will this story continue?By A CustomerThis book is filled with great pictures and tells you how Stephen and Tobias have met and about their travels. The stories are very interesting, printed like a diary. A musthave for every Visionaire collector. After reading this book i only hope that there will be more books which follows up. It would also be nice if there were more pictures in it of Stephen and Tobias.

From a first encounter near Berlin's Brandenburg Gate to a picture-perfect moment in front of a Reykjavik midnight dawn, these two young dreamers have created a collection of photographic meetings that span one year and the entire globe. In 14 different destinations, dictated by their vastly different careers, they discovered a landscape far greater than either traveler had known on his own. Theirs is a universal quest in our increasingly jet-propelled and wired age: to see the world clearly in the brief moment we are given on earth, and to share those insights with another.

About the Author Stephen Gan, born in the Philippines of Chinese parentage, is the founder of "Visionnaire", an acclaimed quarterly publication on fashion and photography. He lives in New York. Tobias Schweitzer is a German-born landscape designer.
